

(Free-Talk) How do I get my Lufthansa boarding pass?

Getting your Lufthansa boarding pass is a straightforward process with several convenient options depending on how you prefer to check in and what devices you use while preparing for your trip. Lufthansa offers passengers the flexibility to obtain their boarding pass through the airline's website, the Lufthansa mobile app, airport kiosks, or staffed check-in counters, ensuring that every traveler—whether tech-savvy or traditional—has a practical way to access their travel document.

Most passengers choose to get their boarding pass by checking in online, a process that typically becomes available beginning 30 hours before departure, slightly earlier than many other airlines. To start, you can visit Lufthansa's official website and navigate to the "Check-in" section, where you will be asked to enter your booking code and last name, or log in using your Miles & More account if you have one. After the system retrieves your reservation, you can review your flight details, confirm your personal information, and select or change your seat. Lufthansa also allows you to add travel extras such as paid seat upgrades, additional baggage, or special meals during the online check-in process. Once everything is confirmed, the system generates your boarding pass and presents several delivery options. Many travelers prefer receiving their Lufthansa boarding pass directly through the Lufthansa app, which offers a seamless digital experience; the pass is stored within the app and remains available offline, making it convenient when internet access is limited. You can also save the boarding pass to your digital wallet—Apple Wallet or Google Wallet—allowing you to access it quickly at security checkpoints and boarding gates without having to navigate through an app or email. For those who prefer a more traditional method, Lufthansa will email you a PDF version of your boarding pass immediately after online check-in is completed. This file can be printed at home or stored on your phone to present at airport scanners. If you choose not to check in online or are unable to—for example, if your travel documents require manual verification for an international destination—you can still obtain your boarding pass at the airport. Lufthansa offers automated self-service kiosks at most major airports within its network. These kiosks allow you to scan your passport, enter your booking code, or use a frequent-flyer card to pull up your reservation, after which you can print your boarding pass and luggage tags within seconds. For travelers checking in baggage or needing assistance, Lufthansa's staffed check-in counters remain available and are particularly helpful if you require passport checks, have special travel needs, or are traveling with pets, oversized baggage, or sports equipment. At these counters, an agent will verify your documents, process your luggage, and print your boarding pass for you. Additionally, Lufthansa's self-service bag-drop machines, available at select airports, allow passengers who already have their boarding pass—digital or printed—to quickly tag and drop their bags without waiting in line. In rare cases, if changes occur, such as aircraft swaps or seat reassignments, Lufthansa gate agents may issue a new boarding pass.

(5815) at the boarding gate, ensuring that you have updated information before boarding begins. Whether you prefer digital convenience or traditional printed documents, Lufthansa ensures that you can obtain your boarding pass easily through multiple channels, helping you streamline your journey and move confidently through each step of the airport experience.